Like One from the Grave. Robert Greenman, who was connected with the Spencer House at the time of the Surgical Institute fire, received serious infurles while engaged in the rescue work. His condition was so critical that physicians said he could not live, and the injured man was taken, at his request, to Canada, to die among relatives. His friends in this city had never received any further word about him, and yesterday they were startled to see him walking the streets with much of his old-time energy. He slowly recovered after reaching Canada, but never wrote his friends. Mr. Green-voters twenty-five minutes in front of the Atkins saw works, between 12 and 1 o'clock yesterday. The larger part of his audience were mechanics in the Atkins works and the Parry carriage factory. The attention was excellent. Some one passed up a note to the effect that a Bynum henchman was present with a bundle of the slanders of the Sentinel respecting his relations with organized labor in Anderson. Mr. Henry called attention to the fact and said that the men who signed the affidavits were guilty of perjury. He never had had a particle of trouble with organized labor; but the best answer to these calumnies was the fact that the members of the strongest labor organization in Anderson, the glassblowers, had organized to support him and had proclaimed the fact in the most emphatic manner.

At 2 o'clock Mr. Henry addressed seventy-five voters at Mount Jackson, in front of the residence of Mr. Baker. The weather was cold, but his listeners gave the closest attention and applauded his many good hits. Colonel Beeler presided.

In the evening Mr. Henry addressed a large meeting at Lawrence. A conservative estimate of the number present was five hundred. Joseph Stoops presided. The audience was composed almost entirely of farmers and about half were Democrats. They manifested the greatest interest and asked a number of respectful questions which Mr. Henry answered with evident satisfaction to the audience. Mr. Henry said, last night, that the meeting was one of the best that he has addressed during the Mr. Henry's appointments for to-day are as follows: At 12:15, corner of Washington and Blackford streets; at 7:30 o'clock, at Odd Fellows' Hall, on Indiana avenue.

TO FILL MR. JOYCE'S PLACE. Republican County Committee Will

Meet Wednesday. The selection of a successor to the late A. J. Joyce, as the Republican candidate for county clerk, which the law makes incumbent upon the chairman of the county committee to fill, will be made Wednesday afternoon, at Maennerchor Hall. A call will to-day be issued for a full meeting of the county committee at the hour of 2 o'clock to-morrow, when a name will be chosen for recommendation to the chairman as the candidate. The decision, therefore, rests with the committee. There is no time for the calling of a convention, as the same must be certified to the printing board at an early date. The committee will meet in executive session.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. JOYCE.

J. C. Adams's Address Before Eighth Ward Lincoln League. The Eighth Ward Lincoln League gave a reception to the candidates on the county and township tickets last night. The reception was given in Lefever's Hall, on Rural street, and the room was crowded. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and all of the speakers were applauded. J. C. Adams was the principal speaker. He said the only thing to talk about during this campaign was the empty flour barrels of the unemployed workingmen. He referred to statesman Bynum, who he said had been unable to get the much needed new federal building, and had not even succeeded in getting an appropriation to pay the government's share of the cost of improving Clifford avenue. The people and Board of Works were ready for the improvement, but Mr. Bynum was unable to get the money appropriated by the government. He also spoke of the general depression resulting from Democratic rule. He said this was probably feit in the neighborhood of the hall wherein he was speaking as heavily as any other locality. A large number of the residents of that neighborhood are workingmen and had secured homes through the aid of building associations. The general hard times had made it very difficult, and often impossible, for them to keep up their dues in the associations through which they secured their homes. Mr. Adams concluded with a touching tribute to A. J. Joyce. Among other things he said:

"My mind goes back to the day of April when he received the nomination which was the culmination of his desires and the fruition of the hope and work of years. I see him now as I saw him on that day, borne down the aisles of the hall on the shoulders of his constant and admiring friends, amid the plaudits of thousands of Republicans, in the full strength of his vigorous manhood. The expression on his face told us the uppermost sentiment of his well-balanced mind was overflowing gratitude and heartfelt thanks to the representatives of that party he loved so well, and to which he had yielded his best efforts.

"Aurelius J. Joyce was no child of forbuilding, and had not even succeeded in get-

"Aurelius J. Joyce was no child of for-tune. He was not born under a lucky star. No fortuitous circumstances or favorable conditions surrounded him in the struggles of his early manhood. His own unaided efforts, habits of integrity, business methods and qualities of head and heart were the impelling forces that gave him position and W. C. Van Arsdel, W. H. Leedy and other candidates also addressed the meeting.

East-End Republicans. S. H. Spooner last night addressed the East End Republican Club at Market and Noble streets. The meeting was large and enthusiastic. Mr. Spooner, who is one of the eloquent speakers of the present cam-paign, talked for an hour upon the tariff and the fine disregard which the present administration has shown for the laboring man. Joseph Broyles, president of the Herculean Club (colored), and W. W. Christy, also colored, addressed the meeting at the conclusion of Mr. Spooner's re-

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FAILED HIM. Death of John Koeppen, for Twenty-Five Years the Journal's Mailing Clerk.

John Koeppen died at his home, No. 174 Church street, at an early hour yesterday morning, from hing fever. He was fiftythree years of age and leaves a widow and several married children. He had been ill but a few days, and had not been confined to his bed save for a few hours before his death. For several years he has been afflicted with asthma, which, complicated with the lung fever, resulted in his death Last Thursday was the first day he falled to appear for his work at the Journal, but even then he did not go to bed, and neither he nor his family considered his condition at all dangerous. On Thursday he consulted Mrs. Anna Dorland, a Christian scientist, at No. 129 North Pennsylvania street, A few years ago Mr. Koeppen was a believer in the teachings of the Christian Scientists and went to Mrs. Dorland for treatment. She said last night that Thursday was the first time she had seen Mr. Koeppen for about two years, and when he came to her for treatment she told him her treatment would do him no good, for the reason that he had not lived according to the teaching of the Scientists. In other words, he had not lived the perfect life required by them. She says Mr. Koeppen called again Friday. He talked with her, told her he intended going home and reading his Christian science books. From that time he was going to live as a true and loyal Scientist. He said he would return to her house on Sunday, but did not come. Mrs. Dorland says she did not treat him during his last illness, but it was evident from the remark made by him to her on Friday that her statement to him the day before had had the effect of reviving in him the belief in Christian science teachings. He kept to his purpose of taking the Christian science treatment and refused to consult a physician till Sunday afternoon. Then Dr. C. I. Fletcher was called in. He told Mr. Koeppen that he had lung fever, which the latter refused to believe. Mr. Koeppen claimed at that time he had no trouble and that he intended returning to work that night. He was advised by his physician that such an act would probably result fatally. True to his word and faith in work that night at the Journal office. He remained but a short time, when he was compelled to return to his home, where he died a few hours later. Mrs. Doriand, in her conversation with a Journal reporter last night, claimed she had treated Mr. Koeppen two years ago and did him much good. Dr. Fletcher also remembered the time when she had treated him. Dr. Fletcher had been treating him for some time before he consulted Mrs. Dorland. The treatment of Dr. Fletcher coming immediately prior to that of the Christian scientist, Mr. Koeppen was led to believe that the good resulting from the physician's treatment was the result of that by the scientist. Dr. Fletcher said he found the lungs very much clogged from the fever, and Mr. Koeppen's going out in the cold air on Sunday night resulted in the further clogging of the lungs, so that it was impossible for him to breathe. Mr. Koeppen came to this country from Germany twenty-eight years ago. He reremained for about eight months in New York, and then removed to LaPorte county, where his father now resides. He was employed on a railroad in LaPorte county for about two years, and then he came to this city. For nearly a quarter of a century he has been employed by the Journal as mailing clerk. During this time he left its employ for a very short time to engage its employ for a very short time to engage in business for himself, but soon gave this up and returned to the paper. He had the full confidence of his employer by reason of his faithfulness to his cuty. He was thoroughly reliable, and so entirely familiar with his work that he seldom had to consult his mailing lists. He never made a mistake. Punctuality was almost a virtue with him. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 c'clock from the Zion day afternoon, at 2 o'clock, from the Zion Evangelical Church, on Ohio street.

Louis Henn Robbed of His Afternoon Collections by Three Men.

BOLD DAYLIGHT ROBBERY.

Louis Henn, a driver for Jacob Metzger & Co., relates a peculiar story of having been held up and robbed of $17.85 in broad daylight yesterday afternoon on the Michigan road, a short distance north of Fall creek. Early in the afternoon he was detailed to collect some bills in North Indianapolis, and was given a spirited horse and a vehicle. He first went to Thompson's road house, where he collected $11.85. Henn states that when the money was being counted out three men unknown to him gathered around him and eyed the currency eagerly. After leaving Thompson's he went to two other saloons in the west-ern part of North Indianapolis, collecting $3 at each place. It was about 3 o'clock when he started citywards. He says that as he was passing a cornfield on the east side was passing a cornfield on the east side of the road he met the three men who had acted so suspiciously at the road house. They jumped on the vehicle and did not heed Henn's orders to get off. Instead, one of the three, a roughly-dressed fellow, caught him by the collar and jerked him backwards off the seat onto the wagon bed. The robber clutched Henn's throat while his companions searched the helpless man's pockets, taking the $17.85, the collections of the afternoon. The three highwaymen dis-played no weapons but told Henn to take the reins and drive rapidly away. They then jumped off the vehicle and ran through a cornfield and escaped. Henn went immediately to his firm's office on Maryland street and reported the affair. The police were then in turn notified.

MANAGER WATKINS IS OURS.

The Head of the Champions Becomes Sharsig's Successor.

Manager Watkins, late of the Sioux City champions, arrived yesterday in the city and signed a contract with President Golt to manage the Indianapolis team next year. When asked about the arrangement last night, he said: "Yes, I have signed to manage the Indianapolis club next season, and I expect to enable it to win away from home as well as at home. This is all that is needed to bring the pennant to Indianapolis. This is a good ball town, and supported the club this last season in splendld style." "Have you signed any players yet?"

"Only Harvey Pastorius, of Findlay, O. He is a young man, and pitched for Toledo during the early part of the season. He won nearly every game in which he pitched at Findlay, and I believe he will prove a good one. There are some other strong players that I want, but there is time enough to get them. We are all unsettled in baseball circles until the meeting on the 20th inst., and when that is over it will be easy to sign a team that will not fail to do the city great credit."

FOUND HIS FATHER'S GRAVE.

J. B. Kern Had Searched for It for Thirty Years.

After a search of thirty years J. B. Kern has located the resting place of his father. The latter enlisted in the late war, and the son, now a gray-haired man of forty-five years, received a letter from the captain of his father's regiment, while it was at the front, stating that his father was seriously ill, and that he was then being brought home. That was the last Mr. Kern ever heard of his father, and almost posi-tive that his father was dead, he started out to find his burial place. Sunday he came to this city and learned from the offi-cers at Crown Hill Cemetery that his father had been buried on Sept. 5, 1864, in the soldiers' plat, tombstone No. 145.

Alleged Lawrenceburg Counterfeiters. Isaac, Henry and Wilbur Levi, father and son, and Nicholas Claxton were arraigned before United States Commissioner Van Buren, yesterday evening, on the charge of making counterfelt money. The men were arrested at Lawrenceburg, last Saturday, by Cincinnati officials, and were brought here Sunday night. The prisoners pleaded not guilty to the charge. They were unable to furnish bond and will remain in jail until the federal grand jury investigates the charges against them.

FUNERAL OF A. J. JOYCE ATTRACT-ED HUNDREDS OF PEOPLE.

Love and Good Will Expressed by Beautiful Flowers-Buried with Selemn Masonic Honors.

The funeral of Aurelius J. Joyce was held at the family home, No. 112 Fletcher avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The attendance was very large and was a convincing proof that the dead man was held in high esteem among all people. Only the relatives and most intimate friends remained in the house during the services, but the general public and hundreds of those who knew him personally filled the yard and the lawns and sidewalks for some distance around. The casket was surrounded and covered with many beautiful floral designs sent by friends and societies of which Mr. Joyce was a member. The designs represented broken pillars, wheels and anchors made of sweet-scented roses, carnations and tuberoses. One of the most beautiful in form as it was most touching in sentiment was a pillow, on which the word "Father" stood out prominent in pale blue flowers. This was a last remembrance of the four fatherless daughters.

The services at the house were in charge of Rev. Joseph F. Williams, pastor of the College-avenue Baptist Church. Mr. Joyce was a member of the South-street Baptist Church, but at present that church is without a permanent pastor. Three weeks ago Mr. Joyce and a daughter sang their last song together. It was "Father, I Know Thy Ways Are Just." The choir of the College-avenue Baptist Church rendered it by request, after which the Rev. Mr. Williams read passages of Scripture descriptive of heaven and the home. 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul," a favorite of the dead, was sung and then Mr. Williams made a short sermon, taking for his text Rev. xxi, 4. "There shall be no more death." Mr. Williams said that no other words give with so much satisfaction in such short space the meaning of the word heaven. When one reads about the streets of gold, the gates of pearl and the throne of God and the Lamb, he is interested and attracted, but at the same time he instinctively shrinks back because he is imbued with the universal horror of death, which is accounted for by the desire to live and the fear of the hereafter." In conclusion he fear of the hereafter." In conclusion he said: "I need not dwell on the character of the deceased. I had only a slight acquaintance with him. You all knew him, and that there was no shrinking in him when the last call came." While the choir were singing "Asleep in Jesus" D. R. Hurst, R. E. Kennington and J. Q. Hicks, representing the Masons, and John O'Nell, S. E. McKee and W. A. Painter, representing the Knights of Honor, of both of which societies the dead man was a member, carried the floral designs to the sidewalk and arranged themselves on either side. The family and relatives were then given their last look at their beloved one, and the active pallbearers, Harry Smith, William Schmidt, J. S. Cruse, W. H. Tucker, Edgar Brundage, William Grover, assisted by W. D. Wilson and R. J. Mc-Gill, the honorary pallbearers, removed the casket to a station where it rested until the members of the two lodges to which Mr. Joyce belonged, and others who desired to do so, viewed the remains.

The funeral procession to Crown Hill Cemetery was formed with the Indianapolis Union Band at the head, followed by mem bers of the two lodges. At the grave the bers of the two lodges. Among the relatives who attended the funeral from out of the city were J. O. Parish, wife and daughters, of Shelbyville; W. L. and Mrs. N. W. Montague, William Joyce and John Joyce, of Acton.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Commercial Travelers' Republican Club, of which Mr. Joyce was a member: "Resolved, That this club learns with deep "Resolved, That this club learns with deep sorrow that our fellow-member, A. J. Joyce, has departed this life. Modesty, uprightness and Christian virtues were the marked characteristics of his life. Respected by all and approachable by the most humble citizen, his counsel was always sought and heeded. At one time he was a popular commercial traveler with worlds of friends, but he now surrenders his last coupon in the mileage book of life.
